1. Status of Budget

Mr. Dulles remarked that the budget hearings were going well. He announced that there was the possibility of working out a budget system on a "no year" basis which would allow us to carry over savings from one year to the next. Colonel White remarked that the "no year" basis applies to the reserve only.

2. Influence of Current Events

Mr. Dulles, in remarking that these were difficult times in the field of foreign policy, warned that sound intelligence is of utmost importance. He cited the situation in Indochina, the march of Communism, and the attitudes of our allies France, Italy, and England. He pointed out that England and France were very reluctant to take any action that might lead to Hot War. Consequently, our intelligence upon which policy is based had to be accurate and timely. He further pointed out that the Communists had taken, and will continue to take advantage of this situation within the allied camp. He remarked that in Southeast Asia our Cold War assets would be called upon and, in fact, probably strained to meet the existing situation.

3. Statements Outside the Agency

Mr. Dulles referred to an article in the Jacksonville Times Union which reported that CIA had killed action against Senator McCarthy. The Director warned again that we must watch our step on security matters, particularly with regard to making statements in public.

4. Monthly Reports

Mr. Dulles mentioned that he was now receiving monthly reports from the overseas stations and noted with pleasure that the field's attitude toward headquarters was improving. Mr. Helms brought out the fact that while these monthly reports were designed not to include action items, such items nevertheless would creep in and suggested that the division chiefs be very

5. Mansfield Bill

Mr. Dulles remarked that at the request of the Clerk of the Senate he had submitted his comments on the Mansfield Bill. In this regard, he stated that he had said neither yes nor no, but he believed that the reply would indicate that we did not want such a bill.
